FRAUD REPORTING PROCESS

for Washington State Consumers

- 1 . If fraud or abuse is suspected, contact the contractor. (Your EOMB or MSN contains contact information for the contractor and/or the insurance company that processes the claim.)
- 2 . You will be asked for specific information (date of service, provider, service billed, specific allegation or question, etc.). Have the EOMB or MSN and any other important documents handy when calling.
- 3 . If the Medicare contractor's customer service center cannot resolve the inquiry through some other explanation, your information will be forwarded to the contractor's fraud unit.
- 4 . Upon receiving the complaint, the contractor's fraud unit records date of your original call, and sends a letter to the beneficiary acknowledging receipt of the complaint. Complaints are prioritized and investigated in order of date received. (FYI: All beneficiary inquiries made to the Part B carrier are taken by the primary contractor, Noridian, based in Fargo, North Dakota; but fraud investigation functions are handled by Transamerica, a subcontractor located in Los Angeles, California.)
- 5 . The Medicare contractor will notify you of the outcome of the review or investigation, usually in writing. (FYI: If a case is referred to law enforcement for criminal investigation, it could be two or more years before an outcome is reached.)
